London Tunnels tourist attraction to offer military intelligence museum

The London Tunnels, a new tourist attraction situated in mile-long underground tunnels beneath the city, will include a permanent exhibition about the history of military intelligence. London's Kingsway Exchange tunnels are currently being transformed into a unique cultural experience, with the plans approved by the City of London last summer. Originally built in the 1940s to shelter Londoners during the World War II Blitz, the tunnels are being restored and opened to the public for the first time. The London Tunnels company has now announced a partnership with the UK-based Museum of Military Intelligence for an exhibition in the attraction. The high-tech exhibition will showcase original artefacts, equipment, weapons, documents and images. It will feature stories from the Battle of Britain and D-Day, as well as the espionage operations of the Cold War, and the terrorist threat of the 21st century.
